Brantley, of Georgia, in the House of Representatives, Thursday, February 22, 1900 The House being in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and having under consideration the bill (H. R. 8245) to regulate the trade of Puerto Rico, and for other purposes - Mr. Brantley said: Mr. Chairman: What is to be done with the Philippines? What is to be their future? What is to be the policy of the United States Government with reference to them? These are questions that interest and concern many people. They deeply concern not only the Filipinos, but as well the people of America, and the answers to them are anxiously awaited by the people of the civilized world. Their importance can not be overstated or overestimated. Upon the answers to them depend the hopes, the aspirations, and the destiny of a people struggling for liberty; and, more than this, there are many who believe that, unless all history be false, the final answers to these questions will determine the fate of a Republic more than an hundred years old, and will settle forever the question as to whether or not a free people can perpetuate self-government or whether such a government must in time perish from the earth. If we concede the gravity of these questions - and all must concede it, no matter from what standpoint they are viewed - it is important to know who can answer them, and it is doubly important to know what the answers will be. It is not questioned or denied that the...
