Not illustrated. 1881 Excerpt: .stock are selling for the average price of recent years. Many store stock farms are given up almost exclusively to sheep feeding. A farm of fair quality should be able to feed three sheep to the Irish acre--say three ewes. Their lambs should be worth some 25s. a-piece, more or less, and 6 lbs. of wool is a fair fleece, which, at ls. 3d. a pound, would amount to 7s. 6rf. per sheep. At these prices, and they are moderate prices, such farms generally pay a handsome profit. These lowland medium farms are those which can most easily be valued on inspection. It is true that the only certain method of arriving at an accurate estimate of the value of any grazing farm is an acquaintance with the quantity and quality of stock which the farm is habitually able to support. This, in the case of valuators under the Land Commission, may be difficult to estimate truly; all that can be expected is that they will exercise (in the case of all pasture farms) due diligence in examining the stock, in endeavouring to ascertain how long they have been fed on the lands, and in comparing their age, number and condition with those of the stock fed on adjoining farms of similar quality; and will also employ due caution to guard against being imposed on by untrue statements, or by inferior animals, driven on for the occasion of the valuation, being palmed off as the produce of...
