Excerpt: . CHAPTER XI. Preparations for another campaign. Proceedings in the British parliament. Conciliatory conduct of general Carlton. Negotiations for peace. Preliminary and eventual articles agreed upon between the United States and Great Britain. Discontents of the American army. Anonymous letters and the proceedings in consequence thereof. Measures for disbanding the army. Mutiny of a part of the Pennsylvania line. Peace concluded. Evacuation of New York. General Washington resigns his commission and retires to Mount Vernon. The splendid success of the allied arms in Virginia, and the great advantages obtained still further south, produced no disposition in the mind of the commander in chief to relax those vigorous exertions which might et be necessary to secure the great object of the contest. I shall attempt to stimulate congress, said he in a letter to general Greene written from Mount Vernon, 41 to the best improvement of our late success, by taking the most vigorous and...
