For nigh onto a whole week my old lady, said Farmer Neverwell, has been off her feed, and complaining of misery in her head and a sort of dull uneasiness of her innerself. S pose you might just as well wrap up a box of those Subway Liver Pills. See here, replied Pillman, the druggist, things haven t been coming my way beyond the speed limit of late, and I have an ingrowing idea that it behooves me to connect with as much money as I possibly can. But bad as I need the stuff wherewith we buy, I am not going to allow one cent to slide into the bowels of my cash register if I have got to cocaineize my conscience before I can ring it up. I am not built according to any such plans and specifications. I am on the level even if I am a druggist, and I don t owe a single solitary sou markee to the Conscience Fund. What I am getting at is this: If you want to buy these Subway Liver Pills for your wife, you can t have them. I have known her too long to become a particeps criminis. Bad as I need the money, I am...
